

Dr. Angeline A. Stanislaus, M.D.,

Chief Medical Director, MO Dept. of Mental Health

What do you love about Saint Louis?

I arrived in STL in 1996 for my residency and never wanted to leave. We have a strong community, and we age together with our friends. There is a strong support system, and you can always count on your “aunties” to help you. The city is small enough to make it conducive to building deep connections. When I moved to STL with my husband, we had a young family. We could always find a babysitter or a friend to help us with our then 3year old daughter - those relationships are important.

What is so special about STL is that people are always so helpful. Strangers will come fix your car if you had trouble on the highway! People are always willing to help you at the grocery stores. You take this politeness for granted until you travel outside of STL.